Wow! What A Week?

Has it really been a whole week again? Even though it was only three days long, We really got to do a lot.

Since we finished reading Stone Fox last week, we started watching the film. We are taking notes in a Venn diagram to compare and contrast the two forms of story-telling. We also started our response to literature, where we use our writing skills to produce an organized and interesting review of the book.

We also were able to preview and choose our next reading groups! This time we chose our groups by the book that was interesting to us. We had 6 books to choose from, and we can’t wait to see what we get to read!

We visited the computer lab to view forecast and surface maps. We used a t-chart to collect data and make a prediction for what the weather will be like in our Adopt-A-City. Over the past few days, we wrote the prediction to sound like a real newscast! We will be presenting these predictions on camera next week! I will send a notice of when we will view these, and you are welcome to come and see!

We introduced ourselves to a new character trait this week– RESPECT! We learned a few verses that explain God’s idea of respect. Essentially, we decided it is the golden rule. Treat others the way you would like to be treated! We created artwork to express our ideas of respect and hung them in the hallway.

Math has been challenging, but we are always up for a good challenge! We are learning about parenthesis in math sentences (basically algebra!). We are learning how to tell if a math sentence is true or not, and how to solve open sentences (like $4 + n = 10$). This group is pretty sharp, and we are sailing right along. Next week, we will wrap the unit up and take our Unit 3 test on Thursday. The study guide went home today.

We will be starting a new project for writing, and I will introduce it at conferences. It will result in a fun day of family and feasting, so get excited!

Homework Back To Normal

Today, new spelling words and a new Bible verse were sent home for next week. That way you can get a head start over the long weekend. A new spelling list for the 2nd 9 weeks is also being sent home. There are only 6 lists due to all of the holidays and short weeks this quarter. We start with week 1.

Homework is the same old routine, but here is a reminder:

The spelling points are due on Friday, with a pretest on Thursday and a test on Friday. The memory verse is new, but we are still memorizing the 1st 25 books of the old testament. The week after next (Nov. 10) we will be memorizing the 1st 30 books, so be practicing!!!

Planners and reading logs are still due on Mondays. Thank you for keeping those routines on track! I am looking forward to getting back into our routines successfully.
